Today's Supply Chain Challenges

Given today's business pressures — higher interest rates, inflation and adverse events — supplier bankruptcies are increasingly likely. Bankruptcies of critical vendors can impact your continuous production and harm your reputation. SupplyChainMonitor™ helps organizations navigate these challenges through continuous monitoring and proactive intervention.

Frequent Bankruptcies

Hundreds of public companies and tens of thousands of private companies fail every year, often disrupting critical supplier relationships.

Financial Stress

Insufficient capital funding reduces production capacity, product quality and delivery reliability.

Black Swan Events

Economic downturns, pandemics, natural disasters and political instability amplify bankruptcy filings and supply disruptions.

Proactive Monitoring Ensures Resilience

Supply chain resilience depends on the ability to quantify risk exposure, anticipate supplier distress and respond rapidly. A fragile or over-concentrated supply base increases vulnerability and disruptions can cascade through the network.

Proactive monitoring and mitigation are essential to maintaining business continuity. SupplyChainMonitor™ fills the data gaps left by internal systems and other business intelligence platforms. Armed with early warnings about financial risk and other threats, you can make more informed decisions about supplier onboarding, sourcing and contingency planning.
